John C. Maxwell is the most popular author in New York . He is a famous trainer in the world. He has sold more than 24 million books. He is so influential that he trained more than 5 million leaders in 180 countries. He also coaches and teaches the top business leaders every year. Now, you do not have to high fees for his course. You can join his course by reading his book with a low price, 95 Hong Kong dollars only. Yet, you can get the full benefits from his book, training course materials.

In his book, he suggests several basic and sound principles that help us to grow and achieve a high target for discovering our full potential.

- Believe in yourself: You must see value in yourself to add value to yourself
- Embrace discipline daily: discipline keeps you growing
- Learn to ask more questions: growth is stimulated by asking why?
- Turn negative into positive: good management of bad experiences leads to great growth

All these principles help us to understand and develop ourselves in a positive way. The principle I like the best is you must see value in yourself and so others. This principle helps us to build up a good social relationship that drives us to grow. You yourself have the responsibility to discover the talents of the people around you. I like this law because we can have more happiness in discovering the positive sides of the people around us. The book is easy to read. It is good entry book for understanding the personal growth in your life, which is a life-long business.
